Firescaping: Planting Against Fire

By understanding a fire's preferences, better choices can be made in landscape design, management, and maintenance practices to help keep people and property safe. At the next Landscape Advisory Committee Meeting, Jennifer de Graaf, (Director of Education, ReScape California) will present on how a fire starts, how a fire moves, and what feeds a fire. Jennifer will provide recommendations on landscape design, materials used, and maintenance considerations to help reduce the impact of a potential fire.

Jennifer de Graaf, PLA, LEED AP, BFQP, QWEL has 20 years of professional experience in design and project management for a variety of project types including parks, schools, hospitals, trail systems, streetscapes, historic properties, commercial housing, and estates and private residences. In addition to project work, she is an instructor for UC Berkeley Extension in the landscape architecture program and serves as the Director of Education for ReScape California.
